Summary

Libraries are educational institutions to preserve heritage and experiences, and a source of awareness for students to advance them mentally and emotionally.

- Seeing the interior design process for university libraries may make the designer put further considerations to include all individuals. A good planning for the library creates the optimal use of the place for all its users without excluding anyone.

- When planning the orientation process within the university library, the designer must be aware of the human differences and foresee the interpretations and expectations that the components of his design create on them in order to lead a complete message that addresses all users and meets their requirements and needs.

- One of the characteristics of modern university libraries is that it is a social environment capable of bringing students together to meet in it where they exchange knowledge and receive knowledge. Therefore, university library design measures are taken as a grants that contribute to achieving real needs in terms of flexibility, dynamism, efficiency of materials and materials used and reaching through design.

- Furniture design has an important impact on the health status of both employees and users of the university's libraries.

- There are different ways of displaying other types of office materials (such as large- small books- maps- periodicals).

- The thoughtful use of textures, colors and lighting is an essential factor in determining the space surrounding the university library users. Air conditioning has an important role in maintaining the comfort of library visitors, and controlling humidity is extremely important in preserving book papers from drying out and damage, as well as the role of fire extinguishers and their types of alarm, extinguishing and fire fighting.
